

Abstract

The invention includes a process for amplifying a reaction between the two elements of a ligand-receptor pair wherein the process includes bringing the two elements of the ligand-receptor pair into contact in conditions suitable to allow their reaction and prior to, simultaneous with, or subsequent to bringing the two elements into contact, applying the electromagnetic signal characteristic of the biological activity of one of the elements to the other element.

